

Bengal tiger come directly at you and you just continue on as though he wasn't there. Sure, you saw something, but you had no clue what you were looking at. That's NOT really "SEEING". So there's seeing and then there's "seeing." Knowing is like that. Sure, you may have met someone and even carried on a conversation. You may even have spent enough time around them to know a little about them; but that doesn't mean you "know" them. English can be a very lame language in it's vagueness. For example, in Spanish there are two words pertaining to "knowing" a thing; Conasie and "conasier." You can give mental accent to the fact that elephants exist by reading about or being told of them, you can be acquainted with the person next door to you, you can even play with the neighbors pet; but are you intimately familiar with any of them? Do you know what makes them tick, how they feel about everything or why they do what they do? Didn't think so. To actually see with understanding and meet Jesus the Christ is to worship Him, to worship Him is to love Him and to love Him is to OBEY Him. It's not rocket science or quantum physics. Jesus once asked His disciples "who do people say I am?" and they listed several things. Then He asked "who do YOU say I am?" Peter replied "you are the Christ, the Son of the living God." To which Jesus then said, "Blessed are you, Simon Barjona, because flesh and blood did not reveal this to you, but My Father who is in heaven." You see, until God really shows you who Jesus Christ truly is you have not "MET" Him. End of story. Your arguments are useless and your excuses to no avail. Jn. 6:44 "No one (that's you) can come to Me (Jesus) unless the Father (God) who sent Me draws him; and I will raise him up on the last day." So, are you being left out? I don't think so, for in 2 Peter 3:9 The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; but is longsuffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance. The time and place of this revelation is not of your choosing, not entirely anyway. For it is God who chooses when to tug at our heart and open our eyes. But it is of your free will that you respond to that call. He tries many times throughout our lives to do so but will eventually stop trying and let you go your own way. This is a sad thing indeed. But at some point, and only He knows when that is, He knows it's futile to continue and lets you have your will. A sobering thought to be sure.

So if you feel something right now, if vision is coming to you that you've not had before or your understanding something said here that did not make sense before; He is knocking! Rev. 3:20 Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he will with me. Think it NOT ODD that this verse is found in Revelation. For it is only by revelation that you will ever meet HIM. So today, if you
