

Him who created them. This is no easy task and few, if any, have ever done it perfectly. But know and believe this. By God's grace, and the power of the Holy Spirit, it is possible.

If you truly love your children, prove it! Get so close to your Heavenly Father that you become so like him it inspires your children to want to know Him. If you fail in this you have failed, period. All else means nothing. Mk. 8:36 But with it all else becomes God's responsibility. He does what you cannot. He provides, protects, guides, instructs, empowers and saves to the uttermost. Can you do all that perfectly? Didn't think so. So lead them by example to Him who will make them an example of His love for all mankind. Do this, and you are successful.

It is also imperative that you know that God is a God of forgiveness and second chances. If your children are still around they are they are still your children. You can still show them the God you love and serve; it is never too late. Repent, ask for another chance; He loves that.

Although there are many many facets to parenting there is but ONE primary purpose. This is NOT my opinion but the overall counsel of scripture. For we're created for one primary purpose, ONE. All else is secondary. You may be successful in raising a disciplined, productive, self sufficient, socially balanced member of society but if you fail in this one primary purpose; YOU HAVE FAILED GOD!
